Big Zeke Taylor arrived in Paducah today from Livingston county, and had a talk with Chief Harry Lloyd. Zeke wants to play ball with the Indians and wants a try-out.
Last season he played about a dozen games as a Redskin and then was released to Hopkinsville, and made good.—Paducah Sun. Zeke is still under a reserve to Hopkinsville and has been sent his contract. If he plays in this League, it will be in a Mogul uniform.

Nig Landsden with a complete ball team has arrived in Fulton, and the town is excited over the appearance of the players. Landsden brought nine players with him from Danville, Ill. Pat Runyan was in Fulton Sunday and was looking over the field with a prospect of joining the Fulton team. Rupert Robertson and Bobby Mercer are two other Paducah players who will try out with Fulton.—Sun.

Efforts are being made to have Mayor Meacham declare either a half or fourth holiday on the 17th, the day of the opening of the Base

Not a Day in Bed.

Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Gramling, Mrs. Lula Walden says: I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Since taking it, I do all the housework for my family of nine, and have not been in bed a day.
Cardui is the greatest remedy for women on earth. Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal woman's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves backache, headache, dragging feelings, and other female misery. Try Cardui. A few doses will show you what it can do for you. It may be just what you want.

Exaggerated Perhaps.

Elbert Hubbard, at the Portland Press Club's reception in his honor last month, advocated good roads wittily.

"In France" he said, "the remotest mountain villages are connected with Paris by white, firm roads equal to those of our parks and race courses. But here—especially here in Oregon!

"I motored yesterday afternoon out from Portland to Estacada and Moiaia, returned by way of Clackamas. The roads were awful.

"What awful roads you've got here," I said to a Molalla farmer.

"Waal, yes," the farmer agreed.
"A mule was drowned yesterday in the road by my orchard."

THREW A FIT*And the Madisonville Police Thought He Was Drunk.

After he had recovered from an epileptic fit which the police mistook for drunkenness, a negro barber of Hopkinsville told Judge Wilson that a $50 diamond pin and $4 in silver had been stolen from him, says the Hustler.

Sunday afternoon a negro was taken off of the "Dixie Flyer, Jr.," apparently dead drunk. Policemen Graddy and Powers loaded him onto an express truck and hauled him to the lockup, where, with the aid of the other two "cops," he was taken and placed in a cell and the charge of drunkenness was set against him.

Two hours or so later he recovered consciousness, discovered the absence of his diamond and money and wanted to know why he had been locked up.

The negro was released after he told a straight story. He said he had fits often and always had them when he became "scared." He said that when the train came out of Hecla two negroes engaged in a fight and torturing he was seized with a fit. He said he had not touched a drop of liquor.

Considerable excitement was created on the streets on the quiet and peaceful Easter Sunday when the policemen were seen pulling up the street an express on which there was a man apparently dead.

FOUND IN THE PICTURES

"You don't want to stay for the pictures, do you?" asked Laura in the tone of one who expects the answer to be "No."

Beth blushed. She took a childish delight in motion pictures, but from the chatter about her, she gathered that it was considered childish to sit through the whole performance. Her cousin Laura seemed to regard the taste for vaudeville itself rather indicative of elementary development.

"Do you mind?" Beth asked timidly.

"There's five department pictures." With a shrug of her shoulder, her cousin settled back in the seat as the lights went out and the first picture was thrown on the screen. The property man and his fellows on the stage supplied the clanging of the bells and the screech of the whistles and to Beth it was all very real. Then the street with its engines vanished from the screen to be replaced by a contrasting picture of three firemen sitting in quarters engaged in a game of cards. Their faces were large enough to show the play of expression and the audience shrieked at the pantomime humor.

But Beth had leaned forward and was looking eagerly at the screen.
Laura tugged at her skirt but the girl did not realize it. There upon the screen was Thad Burnham. She was sure of it. The picture changed again and she sank back into her seat quivering in every muscle.

Rapidly she explained to Laura how Thad had gone away from home, how his letters had stopped and his mother could find no trace of him.
"His mother's heart is breaking for him," she declared. "I must find him and tell him to write home."

She left her seat and with trembling limbs started up the aisle, Laura following her country cousin curiously.
An usher directed her to the balcony where the machine was operated, and she waited until the operator had finished.

He could give her little information other than to furnish her with the address of the firm which had taken the pictures. She could scarcely wait until the next morning to continue her search, and she started immediately after breakfast with a male cousin as an escort.

The manager was courteous and seemed to take an interest in her quest. The pictures had been made in town, he explained, and he gave her the number and address of the engine company. It was far uptown but she could not rest and in a short time she stood in front of the tiny desk beside the glittering engine.

"Is Mr. Burnham a fireman here?" she asked with trembling voice.

"Tommy Burnham is with seven truck," he explained.

"I am looking for Thadwick Burnham," she explained. "He was photographed here for some motion pictures."

"Wickes, Roe and Casey posed for that picture," he declared. "You mean this?"

He took down from the wall a small framed photograph, evidently an en-

"That's Thad," she cried. "I'm sure of it."

"Call Roe down," commanded a voice behind her. The fireman sprang to salute and Beth turned to face a kindly faced man with gold instead of silver buttons and crossed trumpets on his cap front.

"Stand where you will be in the light," directed the newcomer, as he stepped into the background. Wonder-ingly she obeyed his directions as in answer to the call a man came sliding down the brass pole.

Before she could speak he had turned around and came toward her.

"Hello, Beth," he cried. "Where did you come from?"

"What is your name?" demanded the battalion chief. Instinctively the man's hand went to salute, and he gave a puzzled laugh.

"It's Burnham," he said, "yet I know I'm called Roe. What's the matter?"

"You remember the Jane street fire in the shop where you worked?" suggested the chief. Thad nodded. "But you forget that in jumping to the net you fell short and struck on your head. When you came out of the hospital, you had forgotten whom you were."

"I remember now," Thad exclaimed.
"The boys were interested in me and kept me going until I could get in the department. You gave me Richard Roe for a name, eh?"

"I saw you in the picture at the theater," Beth explained. "I knew it was you."

"Which is more than I did," he laughed. "I've been some one else for nearly a year now. Is mother—"

Beth nodded as his voice faltered.
"She is alive," she assured, "but very lonely. She thinks you are dead."

The chief stepped forward. "I'm going up to see the foreman," he said hastily. "Put in your application for leave and I'll see that headquarters grants it."

He stamped up the stairs, and Thad turned to Beth. "And you?" he asked.

"Have you—"

"I've been waiting, too," she assured as her hand stole into his.

"We can have a pretty good honeymoon in 30 days," smiled Thad. "We'll send the picture men some of the cake."

"We must," she agreed, as he kissed her right before the man on watch. "I found you in the picture."
